SENSATIONAL SAVINGS

THE LESBIAN HANDBOOK

by Dale Brittenham, M.A.

Until Now — no other book has dared or been able to rip away the veil of secrecy surrounding the Lesbian world. This incredible book candidly reveals their secret love techniques and the Lesbian's secret "hip" language. It boldly describes the actual behavior of Lesbians in their haunts, the gay bars, their wild parties and secret clubs. Fantastic case histories reveal in detail their double lives, love affairs with both men and women, their insatiable search for pleasure and much, much more.

Special collector's edition. NOW ONLY $3.00

Readers Guide to Sex! SHOW ME THE GOOD PARTS

by Robert George Reisner

Over 2000 books carefully examined for the most forbidden sections! Now, in one huge volume the "good parts" have been culled and classified as to kind — from adultery to zoophilia! No book too bold, no volume too salacious for inclusion in this fantastic bibliography. Page by page, this is a hair-raising excursion into erotic writing! A book to honest, too daring for the shy or easily shamed!

A Giant Volume... NOW ONLY $5.95

Makes the sex adventures of Frank Harris and Henry Miller seem tame!

I, JAN CREMER

You'll flip over the sex-ploits of this international hipster, beatnik, swinging lover with women all over the world. This is the wildest, most exotic autobiography ever written. Follow Cremer's incredible adventures as a gigolo, bandit, smuggler, male prostitute and even a folk singer. You'll learn about his ingenious techniques for making love and making out as a con artist in an underground world of sex, corruption and violence. Handsome, hard cover edition. NOW ONLY $4.95

A Sensation in Europe!

THE RAVISHERS

by Anthony Kirkor

A brutal and shocking book based on the secret white slavery cult that operated in pre-war Europe. Each year, thousands of beautiful young girls were kidnapped and sold by vicious criminals to whore houses throughout the world. This book boldly describes the unspeakable acts and tortures these young girls were forced to undergo by the men and women who operated these houses of lust and cruelty. Not for anyone with a weak stomach. Hard cover. Collector's Edition. NOW ONLY $3.00

Wildier than Candy or even Fanny Hill ! !

PINKTOES by Chester Himes BANNED FOR MANY YEARS!

NUDISM EXPLAINED!

NUDISM today is one of the most fascinating, yet misunderstood Ways of Life in the world. The nude body — male and female, unharmed and unfeared by clothes or conventions — is one of nature's most magnificent sights. Because we feel that NUDISM and the NUDIST WAY OF LIFE has been so misunderstood, we have prepared an illustrated offering of color slides, motion picture films, nudist magazines and publications which describe and clearly show many of the interesting facets of Nudist Life. However, we feel (due to the unretouched and unexpurgated photographs used in this brochure) that we should not direct our circular to those people who do not desire to learn about the NUDIST WAY OF LIFE.

This offer is expressly made to the mature adult, OVER 21 YEARS OF AGE.

If you are interested in seeing what we mean by NUDISM as a Way of Life, for Men, Women, Boys and Girls... and you are over 21 years of age... please send 25c to cover cost of postage and handling to P.O. Box 38100, Hollywood, California 90038. Our reply will be rushed to you in a plain wrapper. If you know others who are interested in NUDISM and NUDIST LIFE, please pass this offer of the natural, unhampered and unfeared way of life... please pass this on to them.

Remember: Just send 25c to Dept. 1190

MONSIEUR ON THE BOULEVARD

THE SHAPE . . .

Twiggy, the skeletal high fashion model from Britain, is the shape of things to come, according to a University of Toronto English professor. Marshall McLuhan, author of the way-out book, The Medium is the Message, said Twiggy is "not a picture, she's an X-ray. She's geometrical, abstract. Forms of womanhood like Sophia Loren have had it."

ANOTHER SHAPE . . .

For those who like girls shaped the way they are now, a trip to Aylesbury, England, is suggested. A woman householder there recently wrote the local evaluation panel to ask for a property tax reduction. She complained her bathroom window was too near the neighbors. "When I stand up in my bath," her letter said, "I can be seen by all and sundry. I do hope you will come and see for yourself."

THE VIETNAM SHAPE . . .

South Vietnam's police claim they've cracked a Viet Cong ring that used beautiful girls as recruiters. The gendarmes say the girls approached youths of military age and then lured them from the capital of Saigon to Commie jungle bases by promising to resume their affair once they joined the Viet Cong.

CRAZY DRIVERS . . .

The national Japanese police agency says it is going to require driver's license applicants to take mental tests. The agency says it found the accident rate for drivers suffering mental disturbance is 10 times the rate for other drivers.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT . . .

A psychological study of married women has found that women who enjoy food the most are also better able to enjoy sex. A researcher says, "One of the predictors of a woman's being able to enjoy sex is her ability to enjoy food." He says the study also found women with "a low level of angry tension are better able to obtain sexual enjoyment. They also get satisfaction from using the musculature of the body, they're active, like vigorous exercise and outdoor activities," the researcher said. The study, conducted at the State University of New York Upstate Medical Center in Syracuse, concluded that, "the ability to enjoy sex is part of a general ability to enjoy the world, to see the world as a fairly friendly place."

DAY AND NIGHT DUTIES . . .

Help wanted ad in Chicago newspaper: Attractive widow for general household duties. Must be compatible. Sleep in, and contribute to the growth of the family.

THE BIG PAYOFF . . .

A gambling machine on a pier at Eastbourne, England, was in the habit of paying off whenever police cars passed by. It was a good deal until its owner shut it off. He found that police radios upset the machine's electronic controls and caused it to hit the jackpot when they went by.

THE LAW . . .

The 50 states have hundreds of screwy statutes. Among them: It's against the law to shave in Connecticut on Sunday . . . A New Jersey World War II law makes it illegal not to work, even if you're a millionaire . . . and New York can seize wampum belonging to the Onondaga Indians.

The new rage for girls with boy friends going overseas...

CHASTITY FUN BELTS

by Hoyt McAfee

It has become the rage among thousands of American girls whose boys friends are stationed overseas, or who're off to the war in Vietnam; they call it the Chastity Fun Belt — an enticing and abbreviated garment any novelty manufacturer can whip together for them. But the device means just what it implies. In short, it's all in fun.

A girl dons it as a tribute to that special guy in her life. He may be bound for duty in one of the hot spots of the world — particularly Vietnam. During his final hours with his No. 1 girl, he wonders out loud what will happen to her.

Will she go stepping with other fellows as soon as he leaves? Sensing what's bothering him, his special girl flashes him a fetching smile and speaks up: "Hey, Honey, I've got a surprise for you. Take a peek at what I'm wearing tonight."

With which she hoists her skirt high enough for him to glimpse her novelty garment. Fashioned much like an enlarged bracelet, it encircles her upper thighs becomingly. She goes on to explain:

"Several of my girl friends wear one just like it. It's their way of letting their best boy friend know they'll be true to him so long as he deserves such devotion."

He, the war-bound GI, laughs heartily over what she has just shown him. She joins him. Then they may settle back for a bit of serious discussion. During the course of it, she makes it clear that she will remain his girl — and wear the Pantie Chastity-Fun Belt — unless she finds out he's running around with foreign girls.

Sometimes she can find this out by what he put into his letters to her — or what he omits from them. Once convinced

YES, WE HAVE NO BANANAS

by Bill Majeski

for getting a monkey on your back . . .*

The Scene: The banana-paneled office of the Tropical Equatorial Banana, Pomegranate and Kumquat Co. Behind the desk, shaped like a banana, is the company president, Desmond Gerferfer, shaped like a pomegranate. With him are the Messrs. Lasmery, Spasm and Diamondback of the company's advertising agency.

SPASM: I tell you, Mr. Gerferfer, you're missing the boat with that silly ad push on bananas as a health food. You have to reach the teen-agers, hit 'em right in the flight deck.

LASMERY: That's right, sir. Last year hippy teen-agers spent 98 per cent of the money given to them by their parents.

GERFERFER: We're an old established firm. I see nice bananas, diced bananas, cut-up bananas, little old ladies in tennis shoes eating bananas.

SPASM: That's another thing. Kids are smoking tennis shoes to get their kicks. But that's another client. And we're doing wonders for him. Our TV ads show a teen-ager smoking his tennis shoes and when he leaps over the net—he really leaps over the net, sweetie.

LASMERY: The net on the next court!

GERFERFER: It seems we'd be exerting an unhealthy influence . . .

SPASM: Nonsense, the kids do it anyway. Look at our guinea pig over there, a former teen-ager himself, Lager Diamondback. Unknown to

Wiseman

"But you flunked all your exams! How can you say you learned a lot studying with Gloria?"

you, he's been smoking bananas bananas in that pipe since this meeting began. How do you like bananas, Lazer?

DIAMONDBACK: Bananas are colorful. I like to see teen-age girls going to school with bananas draped over their heads.

LASMERY: That's bandanas, you dum-dum. Puff away. Mr. Gerferfer, let's whack away at the teenagers pocketbooks. Listen to this: Come fly with Tropical Bananas — non-skid landings everytime.

SPASM: How about: a banana a day keeps the doctor away and any other problems, too.

LASMERY: Publicity. Force. Happiness with slogans. You remember what we did for prune juice.

DIAMONDBACK: I remember what prune juice did for me.

SPASM: Quiet, hash head. Mr. Gerferfer, we toss out that fat Central American dame you got as your symbol. We use a buxon broad in an abbreviated mini-bikini which doubles as a bookmark. Notice how we insinuate a little educational note to gain favor with the academicians. Show him the picture of Lolita.

LASMERY: (holding up picture) Ain't she some pumpkins?

DIAMONDBACK: I love her! I love that sex symbol!!

SPASM: Shut up and smoke.

GERFERFER: I don't know. I'm a family man myself. A wife, daughter, son . . .

SPASM: A son who's on airplane glue . . .

GERFERFER: No, that's my daughter. My son smokes sneakers . . . while he's wearing them! Three times we've had to call the fire department to extinguish him. I don't like the whole business. Trouble. Bad for the nation's health.

LASMERY: Nonsense. We're thinking of lobbying for a national Hallucinogen Day.

SPASM: How does this grab you? The family that flies together stays together.

LASMERY: I use bananas — don't you wish everybody did?

SPASM: Tropical Bananas contain your daily requirement of serotonin. Yes, serotonin, a neurochemical closely related to psilocybin and dimethyl tryptamine, and those other harsh-tasting mind-benders.

LASMERY: Tropical Bananas are milder.

SPASM: Want speedy relief from tension? Just sit back on a toadstool and light up a Tropical Banana. You'll be glad you did!

LASMERY: Be the first in your block to smoke a banana.

GERFERFER: I'll admit it's got some appeal . . .

DIAMONDBACK: Appeal, he said . . . a peel . . . banana . . . he's funny. Where's my sex symbol? I want my sex symbol wrapped around my head wearing sandals.

LASMERY: Shut up and puff, rummy.

GERFERFER: I'm still reluctant though. I heard a boy was badly hurt last week using bananas for a lift.

SPASM: Exactly. The kid was a novice. He tried to inject a whole banana into his arm . . . skin and all. His arm bulged like Popeye's. Two little monkeys at the zoo kept climbing up his arm.

LASMERY: We at LSD agency would put on instructional TV spots, showing the right way to use bananas. The safe way. The good American way.

SPASM: Always smoke a banana with a friend. Never smoke alone.

LASMERY: When banana-flying, at night, dim your eyeballs when approaching another banana.

GERFERFER: Now it's making sense.

SPASM: And dollars, Mr. Gerferfer.

GERFERFER: Call me banana-nose.

LASMERY: Okay, banana-nose. Spasm's right. Think of the auxiliary products. Ball-point banarras.

SPASM: Electric banana brushes. LASMERY: Bananas that glow in the dark.

SPASM: Banana hearing-aids.

LASMERY: Banana guitars!

GERFERFER: Hmmm. . . .

SPASM: But as a final convincer, banana-nose, let's look at our friend, Diamondback. When he first came in he was tense, nasty, withdrawn, overbearing and vulgar. Look at him now.

GERFERFER: Why is he banging his head on the file cabinet?

LASMERY: Mind expansion. Releases pent-up inhibitions. No more frustrations, no anxieties.

GERFERFER: No file cabinets. Now he's up in the chandelier and he's removing his shirt.

SPASM: He's flying tourist, banana-nose. The stuff dreams are made of. And best of all . . . look. I take his banana ashes and dump them on your window box of petunias. Now watch.

GERFERFER: It's amazing. The petunias are growing larger and larger and they're forming in the shape of . . .

SPASM: Yes . . . in the shape of a generously endowed Hollywood starlet.

GERFERFER: Love it!

LASMERY: Pick a petunia and light up. There . . . now puff away. Dream-time, banana-nose.

GERFERFER: Call me petunia-puss. It's about time somebody came up with something for teen-ager's fathers. Ah, come fly with me, hallucinogenic Hollywood starlet with unlisted measurements and cheeks of tan as we waft gently down the pathways of ethereal bliss, a midnight kiss, a jug of petunias and you . . .

(The three of them, with petunias jammed in their lips, sing softly in unison — "Yes, We Have No Bananas, But Petunias Are Here To Stay." They sing softly so they don't disturb Diamondback, who is curled up in the file cabinet under the letter S . . . for Stupor.) □ that he's playing the field, she will feel perfectly free to shed the Chastity Fun Belt.

This latest rage for wearing The Belt originated among the hordes of lonely government girls in Washington. D. C. not long ago. One day, while doing research for her boss in the Congressional Library, a pretty secretary came across a drawing of a real chastity belt. An accompanying note explained that European men forced their wives and girl friends to wear this hellish device during their Crusades to the Holy Land centuries ago.

That night the G-girl told some of her colleagues about the belt. One of them, in turn, hit upon the idea of spoofing it. Whereupon, five of them trooped off to a gadget manufacturer and explained what they had in mind. One day later he had completed it—an easy-to-slip-on-and-off Pantie Chastity-Fun Belt.

By contrast, remember that the original belt was a cruel and confining device. Men wanted to make certain their wives and girl friends would remain sexually faithful to them during their long absences. Accordingly, they had clever locksmiths fashion belts which permitted the wearers to perform acts of nature but prevented them from engaging in sex relations. After long months of waiting for their hubbies and sweethearts to return from jousting with the Infidels, however, the females back home grew restless and eager for some loving.

Bolder ones made a few tentative feelers to the village locksmith and, more often than not, they found him "receptive." Sure he would make a duplicate key for them, one which would unlock the confining chastity belt—for a "price."

By which he meant a financial sum or "special favors" from the woman anxious to be freed from her shackles. All of the evidence suggests that many, if not most, of the females of that age paid the "price." As proof, there were repeated instances of children born on the home front two and three years after the hubby had left for the Holy Land!

At a later date, William Shakespeare evidently had the chastity belt in mind when he observed: "Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast, yet love breaks through and picks them all at last!"

As amazing as it may seem, the notorious chastity belt occasionally pops up in the news to this day. Some time back, for instance, Jean Duval, a 43-year-old Paris (France) druggist forced his sexpot young wife to don an old, cruel, confining chastity belt.

After considerable suffering from it, she went to the police and complained about the indignity heaped upon her. Her husband was arrested and brought to trial. Turning to the judge, he whined:

"But, Your Honor, she was young, sexy, and other men coveted her. It (the chastity belt) was the only way I could keep her faithful to me."

Stern-faced and unimpressed, the judge sentenced him to two years in the pokey!

As to the popular device now worn by puckish girls around the nation, it can—as has already been explained—be donned and doffed freely. No locksmith, no kind of key, figures in the picture.

In various seaport cities, where sailors and marines frequently spend their liberty hours, girls by the dozens wear it. This reporter has made it a point to sound out a representative cross-section of them.

One leggy blonde told me her Pantie Chastity-Fun Belt gave her a "feeling of distinction." She added: "I like my guy well enough to wear it while he's in Saigon. Five and six times a week I receive his sweet letters. No one can tell me he's running around over there with B-girls or dance-hall girls."

But a saucy redhead explained her philosophy in these words: "My boy friend and I had a lot of fun talking about mine. He thought it was cute. And he promised me he'd be true to me—even if he has to do overseas duty five or six months or longer."

With a wag of her head, she assured me: "I'll wear my Chastity Fun Belt till he comes home—or another guy comes along and makes me want to take it off!" □

ADS FOR SEX GERMAN STYLE

by Paul Brock

"Lilo is my name and I am warm, willing, shapely and passionate. I am looking for a lover who really loves, and who can think of nothing else when he is in my all-enfolding arms. Put your own arms around me, my lover, and you will see that I am speaking the truth. Hold your lovely, soft, seductive Lilo tight. Together we will open love's heaven. Together we will make the journey to ultimate ecstasy a rhythmic, soaring dream."

It might be a translation of classical Greek erotica. But in fact, it's just a sample of the sizzling, sex-seeking ads seen everyday in West German newspapers.

Now replaced are the traditional lonely-heart ads which went like this — "Respectable lady would be willing to met well-mannered and financially stable gentleman, no triflers please." The man-hungry gals of the Fatherland are waxing realistic and now favor earthier stuff calculated to appeal to the man-on-the-street.

The new approach is getting results, too. Replies to matrimonial ads have increased sixfold over the past three years. The lonely hearts columns of the West German daily and weekly newspapers are expanding faster than the population explosion. And it has all happened since the girls got away from the standard format. The "lonely young lady, 25, seeks eligible, responsible husband" just didn't get any takers.

Lilo, in her self-sell spiel quoted above, goes on to admit that she has "seen 27 springs come and go." And though she says she doesn't know how to perform the modern dances, she does admit to knowing a thing or two about sex.

"I am waiting for you in our little apartment, darling," she purrs before ending her ad. "Love me long and gloriously after writing to Box XIX."

Such bait - and - see advertising would never be permitted in the columns of our own staid newspapers. . . but then our big cities are not plagued by West Germany's severe shortage of unattached males. The competition for husbands and boy friends is really fierce in the Fatherland, and to arouse interest a gal has to lay all her assets on the line.

Take "Herta" for instance, advertising in the Hamburg Bild-Zeitung. She announces that she is "nearly thirty," and wants "just a working man who is looking for feminine comfort and love which he will find are far superior to the comfort and love he may be paying for right now." She hopes to "sit hand-in-hand with you, my darling, on our special sofa, and only the moon will peep as you take me urgently into your arms."

"Marie," just as anxious to please, offers two bonuses to the guy who agrees to slip a ring on her finger. She reports that she "spent two years as an exotic dancer and therefore am well trained in the essential arts of physical undulation. I can also cook."

"Esther" claims that she is "only twenty" and that she longs "for someone to kiss me tenderly and stroke my long soft hair lovingly." She offers in return "a satiny shoulder for your handsome head to rest upon." Also following the old theory that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, Esther adds "The table in my apartment is set for you and you alone, my darling. How would you like a nice, home-cooked schweinebraten, with vegetables, and a cold bottle of beer and me to go with it?"

But Esther bravely demands something in return for such bliss: "I have been hurt before, my lover. You have to promise that you will always be true to me and that you will never leave your little adoring sweetheart all alone."

Some of the ads go further. A coquette from Cologne describes herself as "a seductive, curvaceous, good-looking, green-eyed, sexy-looking but uncomplicated brunette," then lets loose with this schmaly valentine: "Hello, young lover! I see in your handsome, 20-year-old visage something which speaks of sadness and frustration. This is because you are seeking happiness with a beautiful and responsive woman. Look no further, my darling. I invite you to find fulfillment and comradeship with me right and day, but on the one condition that you do not swear."

In spite of the preponderance of single females, the matrimonial columns aren't restricted to them. Parents anxiously advertise their daughters. Men seek duplicates of Mom or a deceased wife. In-laws request help in finding an attentive boy friend for Mom, now a widow.

Occasionally the men outdo the women in come-hither promises. "Niklas," for instance, says he is "27 and astonishingly good-looking." He promises the right woman "to soon stand before your door, to take you softly in my arms and hold you. It does not matter if you are not beautiful, my love. With my adoration and your co-operation you will be made beautiful — I swear it."

But Niklas is not only yearning for passionate love. He has a small problem: "Along with me comes a small, helpless bundle of charm, a lonely little baby crying for her mommy. Please do not turn away from us, darling. We need you, both of us."

Sometimes embarrassing coincidence steps in to complicate matters. There was the case of "Hans" who described himself in the lonely hearts columns as "a handsome devil of a man, legally separated, seeking a passionate, fun-loving female friend." His ad was promptly answered by a woman who described herself as "a handsome devil of a widow."

She turned out to be Hans' wife. Discovering her husband's duplicity, and completely forgetting her own, the irate wife phoned the paper and bawled out the lonely hearts editor. "How dare you break up my home by accepting an ad from my two-timer of a husband!" she demanded.

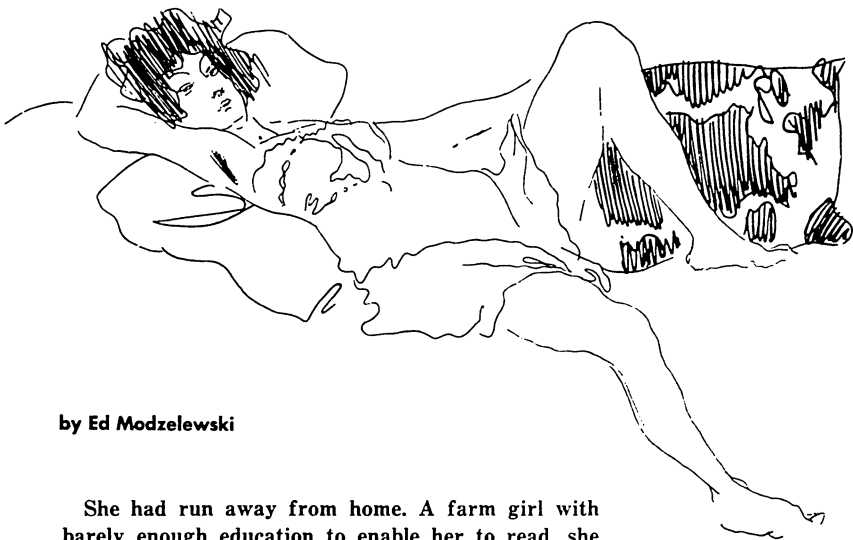

It was inevitable, of course, that international espionage should get into the lonely hearts act. The sizzling invitations to romance also make good bait for blackmail and

"I'm faithful to my husband—I only use the pill with the others."

Bread was the broad's real name and she sure went for the dough...

by Ed Modzelewski

She had run away from home. A farm girl with barely enough education to enable her to read, she came into Alfie's bar in the Soho section of London to make her fortune.

The other girls eyed her suspiciously as she entered the bar. She had spent the money that she filched from her parents and paid for a week's rent at the rooming house that she had read about in the magazines which her father had forbidden her to read; the rest of her money went for the clothes she wore.

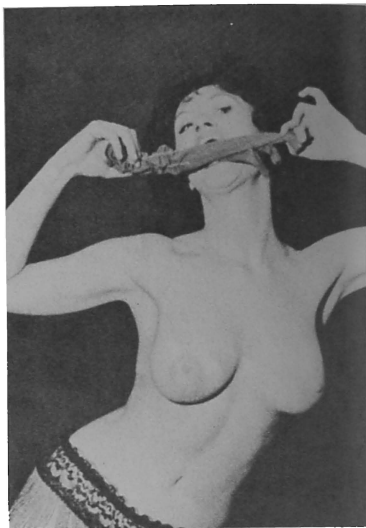

She was a fairly tall girl, not yet twenty, with ash-blonde hair that fell to the middle of her back, straight, except for the curl on the ends. She wore a bright yellow mini-skirt and a tight-fitting black sweater.

She sat at an empty table, the skirt riding up over the tops of her black net stockings and exposing her milk-like thighs. Her face was cream with a pale pink coloring at the high part of her cheeks. Her short nose turned upward slightly, and when she smiled to the others, her green eyes sparkled between the narrow slits. She was really something.

New Girl On The Hustle

DI DI

Didi is a dancer of exceptional grace and agility. As you can plainly see, even when she poses she suggests movement. It's a pleasure for a photographer to work with a model like Didi because he doesn't have to worry about her looking stiff or static. Didi studied ballet and her classical training is supplemented by her classical features and beauty. One of her night club specialty numbers is a combination ballet-belly dance and when she performs, she reminds viewers of an over-active switchboard — every one of her lines is busy. Although she isn't particularly interested in politics, it has been suggested that she run for Congress because she sure can put a motion before the house. She sure would get our vote. □ and THE MAD SCIENTIST'S EVIL INTENTIONS OR...

CALL ME A TAXIDERMIST.

THERE IS THE LABORATORY OF EVIL PRESIDED OVER BY THE CHAIRMAN BY CHICANERY, DR. MANIC WHO LUSTS SOMETHING AWFUL FOR THE SWINGER...

AH, SWINGER!
I WORSHIP AT YOUR FEET-- BECAUSE I MUST BEGIN SOMEWHERE! BUT SOON YOU WILL BE MINE, ALL MINE WITH ENOUGH LEFT OVER TO MAKE 10 VIVACIOUS VIVIAN DOLLS. YOU WILL SUBMIT, SWINGER, OR...

...BECOME PART OF MY OWN PRIVATE WAX WORKS. LIKE RHONDA THERE... OR DONDI, AND NANCY AND PRANCY. YES, SWINGER, YOU WILL BE PRINCESS OF MY WAX PARADE, HEADING THE LIST OF THE GIRLS WHO REFUSED TO SUBMIT. HMMM, WHERE IS THIS SEXUAL REVOLUTION TAKING PLACE I READ SO MUCH ABOUT?

AND HOW WILL I DO IT? GLAD YOU ASKED, FUNNEL-HEAD. COME MONDAY...

The girls buzzed jealously. Each of them had something special about them that attracted the men, but this newcomer seemed to have it all; nature had bestowed her gifts in abundance upon her.

The waiter brought over a pint of ale. She sipped some, swallowed, and made a face while shaking her head. The top of her full torso shook as she did so and the few men that were in the place sighed in unison.

One of the girls came over to her and introduced herself to the pretty newcomer.

"My name is Lizzie. What the hell are you doing here?"

"Do sit. My name is Bread; Genevieve Bread. My friends call me Ginger."

Lizzie sat, eyeing the pretty lass. "I want to make my fortune here," Ginger continued. "I read all the books and magazines about you girls and I want to try it." Ginger Bread seemed quite excited.

"A fortune? That's a good one." Lizzie slapped the scarred wooden table with the palm of her hand and laughed aloud.

"Yes, and perhaps you can help me," Ginger said rather shyly.

"Help you? How?" Lizzie seemed interested.

"Well, I've never done it before," the pretty girl sighed, her breasts heaving against the tight sweater.

"Just set the price and get paid beforehand, honey," the older girl stated.

Ginger dropped her gaze to her hands which were in her lap.

"Oh, no," Lizzie exclaimed. "You mean, you've never not even in the hay or . . . ?"

"No, never," Ginger's face reddened.

Lizzie stood up, told her to go back home, and left, latching on to the balding gent that was arguing about the soccer game.

The other girls heard much of the conversation and were talking and laughing about it. Nevertheless, the best-looking man in the place went over to Ginger Bread and within fifteen minutes walked out with her.

She was back an hour later and out again within a half-hour with a debonaire chap.

When she came back later that evening, the other girls did not laugh at her any longer, but took her in as one of them although they were all jealous of her young beauty.

A few of them came over to the table where the lovely, new professional sat and exchanged pleasantries with her.

"You must be at least a fortie," Kelly said. She had flaming red hair and wore a dirty green dress. She was a bit flat-chested.

"Two quickies. You've started in fine style," Mimi, the brunette from across the channel, exclaimed. She hadn't had a payment in a fortnight.

"I turned a trick myself tonight," Lizzie, the last of the group, stated. "It makes me hungry; let's eat."

The others agreed.

Not Ginger Bread.

"I've no time for that. I have to make my fortune first." She got up on a signal from the gent with the beckoning finger over in the corner.

They left after a minute of conversation.

"That Bread, she'll never last if she doesn't eat regular," Lizzie said to the others. They nodded and ordered their meal.

The following few days saw Miss Bread in and out with many men. The girls talked about her endurance. No one ever saw her eat.

Toward the end of the week, Ginger looked as if she had lost a lot of weight. The others cautioned her to take care of herself.

"I've no time to eat. I must make my fortune," she would reply to their entreaties.

Her pink cheek turned sallow and the sparkling green eyes appeared to sink into darkened hollows. She lost her cheerfulness, and some of her customers. She was not as attractive as before, and had to adjust her price accordingly. Her face was beginning to show the strain, her bust sagged and her ribs showed through her skin. She wore the same yellow mini-skirt, only now it came down to the top of her knees due to the weight she had lost.

Every morning she took her payments down to the Big Ben National Bank of London, where she had her account. She couldn't resist temptation and she seduced the teller, banking his payment also.

By Thursday of the second week, she looked a shadow of her former self. Her posture, formerly upright, was now bent. Her complexion turned yellowish, her eyes barely opened, and the dirty yellow mini-skirt continually slid off her boney hips.

She was not out Friday night. Saturday morning the girls crowded around the ambulance.

"Bread is very sick," Lizzie announced sadly.

"I saw her as they put her into the ambulance," Kelly cried. "I think she is going to die."

"I think so too," Mini said. She tried to make the ambulance driver. It was no go. She hadn't had anyone for four weeks.

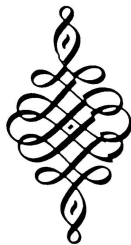

Mary was crying. "If only she would have eaten, she would have been okay."

That night, Bread died.

The next day the minister asked the girls at the funeral if any of them would like to say a few words over her still form. The girls all looked at each other, then the other three stared at Lizzie.

Lizzie took the prayer book from the minister's hand and fumbled through the pages. Unable to find a suitable passage, she closed it tearfully and stated, "We all knew that BREAD COULD NOT LIVE BY MAN ALONE." □

AUDREY

Take a look at Audrey and what is the first thing that comes to your mind? Well, if you are as big a liar as we are, you'll probably say that her name reminds you of that wave of limericks that were the rage when most of us were in our early vintage. For example, do you remember:

Little Audrey with a grin
Drank down all of poppa's gin,
Mother said, when she was plastered,
"Go to sleep, you little love child."

Now why the name Audrey was selected to go with these limericks, we will never know. After all, Audrey is not that common a name. The only reason we can figure that the limericks have been attributed to Lil Audrey is that some poor guy did know a babe by that name and her hellcat personality inspired him to immortalize her in verse like Byron and the Bard, only different. And how different you can judge for yourself from some further examples:

*Little Audrey with a shout,
Gouged the baby's eyeballs out;
Stamped on them to make them pop.
Mother cried, "Now, Audrey, stop!"*

*Audrey in the cauldron fell;
See the grief on daddy's brow;
Daddy loved his darling well—
Audrey's quite hard-boiled by now.*

*Audrey, with a thirst for gore
Nailed the baby to the floor.
Mother said, with humor quaint:
"Careful, Aud, don't mar the paint."*

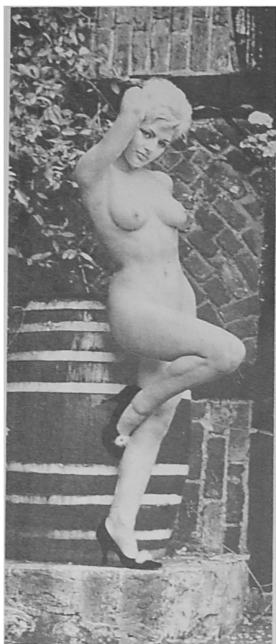

And here's another—

Audrey saw some dynamite,
Couldn't understand it quite;
Curiosity never pays:
It rained Audrey seven days.

Now you might ask, what's all this got to do with the Audrey pictured here? Well, we would have to admit that that is a good question and until we come up with a good answer, we suggest that you just go right on enjoying the pictures. Audrey won't mind. □

contacts for spies and agents.

"Handsome, virile businessman, 35, good dancer, luxury flat and car, seeks acquaintance of warm-hearted natural woman 30-45 for leisure time activity and possible marriage."

That advertisement in West Berlin and Hamburg newspapers recently triggered a warning from the West Berlin city government. That handsome, virile businessman might turn out to be a dedicated, utterly ruthless Communist spy, a city official pointed out.

The official warning did not condemn the popular practice of seeking a mate or friend of the opposite sex through the meaty lonely hearts ads. By no means. But it did advise caution, lest a meeting with the virile advertiser end up with a ride to an East German prison.

Another government spokesman revealed that the East German "state security service" (the secret police) regularly place provocative ads in western publications in an attempt to recruit West Berliners as agents.

Communist agents also answer some of the lovelorn ads appearing in western publications. One of their main aims is to seduce lonely sex-starved women working for the West German Government and trap them into giving information about their duties or their superiors. Manless German secretaries employed by American and British consulates are particularly sought after, by such pie-in-the-sky ads as this one:

"Refined young nobleman of Hapsburg stock, 24, six feet tall, 175 lbs., athletic and romantic, with substantial private income and investments. Finest legal references. Lonely, seeks companionship of intelligent, responsive woman. Sincere object matrimony."

Few man-hungry females in Germany can resist such glamorous mate-bait. ☐

GET YOUR ASS OUT WEST

"Buried treasure," according to an old saying, "is where you find it." And, believe it or not, there is real buried treasure waiting to be found in hundreds of the old New Mexican mining camps which were abandoned so many years ago. To many people the two words "buried treasure" sound quite exciting and thrilling, but is it practical?

The late treasure-hunter of the Old West, who was murdered for his two safes of unearthed gold nuggets and dust two years ago, Frank L. Fish was a sort of twentieth-century prototype of the early prospector and miner who first discovered the yellow and white ores in the creeks, rivers and mountains of the early New Mexico mining camps. However, Fish, unlike his predecessors who sought their gold and other ores with pick and spade, used electronically devised metal detectors to locate his caches. Too, he confined his efforts to the abandoned and lost mine sites of long deserted, and many lost, mining camps and ghost-towns of the Old West.

These long abandoned camps once roared with the excitement of the gold "strikes", and were known, in their heyday, as the roughest and toughest of all pioneer settlements. During that rip-roaring era miners, gamblers, adventurers, renegades, bandits, thieves, and gunmen, all seeking quick riches, stampeded by the thousands into these Western regions.

In numerous instances, sudden death, compulsion, and "new diggings" caused many to depart quickly to new fields without even the bother of taking their belongings, leaving both bag and baggage stowed in some deserted shack or cabin, and often buried beneath the sand for safe-keeping. Many never returned to claim their belongings and valuables. These were the relics and treasure which the late Frank Fish searched for and, up to the time of his death, he had accumulated a private collection exceeding some ten thousand items.

To Fish, who had been recognized as a noted geophysicist and explorer of these out-of-the-way sites, it was first a hobby, which he had made pay off. To him a leather bag of gold nuggets, a rusty tin-can or a gallon jug containing dust or nuggets, or a cache of silver bars and old coins was as common a find as a city boy's picking up a dime or quarter at some bus stop today; and a time-stained and ragged-edged parchment or old map of early New Mexico or other Western State's history held more certainty than a letter from the draft board to the average young man.

There are hundreds of early-day sites lost since their heyday in New Mexico pioneering history which still contain their relics and riches. Most anyone with a spirit of adventure, a little good luck, the persistence to make a careful survey, the possession of modern electronic locating equipment (which is fairly inexpensive) and, of course, permission of the property owners, may perhaps find real wealth.

So, go West, young man thar's still gold in them thar hills! □

Once-famous Wells-Fargo stagecoach stop (above), built in 1851, later housed some 10,000 old-West relics and artifacts unearthed by Frank L. Fish. Chinese relics (right) from the gold-rush era include opium pipes, coins, a watch, and scales for weighing gold dust and nuggets. Excavations by Frank L. Fish (below left) yielded not only a variety of mining tools and implements but the skull shown in his hand. Treasure enthusiast (below right) carries an Explorer metal locator near the site of an abandoned mine.

THE (NOT VERY) COMPLEAT WOMAN

by Adobe James

TO: The President
Star Model Corporation
New York, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

I haven't been feeling too well lately—a broken leg following a water-skiing accident. My activities have been somewhat curtailed as a result. Some very good friends, in an effort to keep my mind off my physical ailments, gave me your model kit, the VOYABLE WOMAN. (Over one hundred and fifty parts—Learn by doing!)

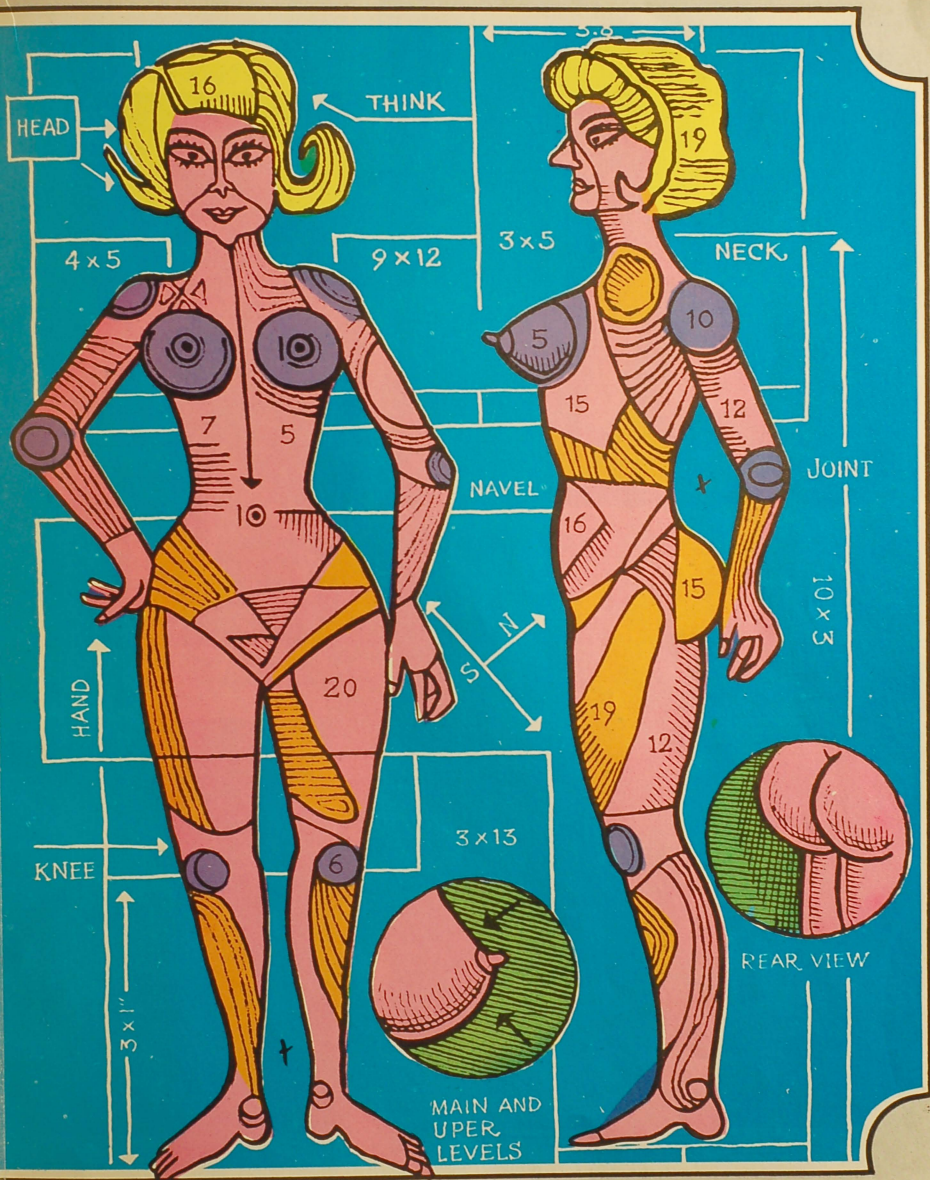

I need not tell you what a thrill this gift brought me. I ripped open the package, and reverently removed the skeletal frame. I placed the skeleton on top of the plastic display base and began gluing the various parts of the kit together. Ah . . . the joy of creation: it was almost as if I were a god assembling the first woman. My hands were trembling with suppressed excitement as I cemented the facial bones and mandible to the skull base. The delicate little humerus, the radius-ulna, the clavicle bones, all fell rapidly into place. "The thigh bone's connected to the knee-bone; the knee bone's co-nec-ted to the leg bone . . ." I was singing as I worked, and feeling better than I have since I fell off the bar stool in the cabin cruiser.

After some hours, the skeleton was fully assembled; I then began working on the Voyable Womans internal organs.

Perhaps I should tell you that I am, by nature, a very shy man. (I was twenty two years old before I could bring myself to read the ladies side of the laundry list.) Some of the female organs did not bother me . . . the heart, the lungs, the spleen, pancreas, duodenum, thyroid Sooner or later everyone is going to find out, so we might as well let the cat out of the bag right now — Patti is addicted! She's hooked! She can't kick the habit. She's a compulsive punster! She claims she was a very fat baby and that it all started from girth. Which gives you an idea. At one time, Patti was a photographer's helper and becoming a

If a man is brilliant, why should he worry? I mean, why should a genius care about anything except his work? Isn't that why he's a genius, because he's not like you or me and he's got a terrific mind all wrapped up in whatever endeavor it is that challenges the great resources of his intellect?

That's the way I understand it, but when I consider Morton Reystacher I get moody and I begin to drink and I think about him some more. Sometimes I get so angry I go out looking for a fight, just to let off steam. Who, I ask you, is supposed to see to it that a genius like Morton Reystacher should make the most of his talents in this crazy world?

He was a big, slow man, sloppy in the shoulders and backside, and he had a sleepy child's eyes and a soft smile. Shortly before his divorce, his wife, Natalie, told him that if he were boiled in oil, which she considered as a highly desirable culinary undertaking, the inevitable result would be a distasteful but appropriate egghead pudding. Enchanted, no doubt, by her analytical wit, she followed him around the house for an hour, hissing "egghead pudding!" at him—while he, Morton, hands in pockets, paced somberly, deep in thought, giving no indication that he had any knowledge of what she had said or was saying or, in fact, of her existence.

On other occasions, when (continued on next page)

she had taken a male acquaintance into the bedroom, Morton was able to hear her voice in his locked study (although it was only his subconscious that got the message at the time)—he heard Natalie loudly asserting that her husband was “professor slob.” That, and worse.

But when the insults were flung at him, directly or indirectly, Morton was never offended. Not at the time, for his mind was, normally, entombed in another world, the world of Hellenistic Greece, upon which he lavished all of his affection, interest and brilliance. So it took days, or weeks, or months for the slanderous remarks to emerge into his consciousness—and then he felt mortally injured and helpless.

In terror of his wife, who had once attempted to stab him with a broken fountain syringe and another time had struck him full in the face with a breakfast tray, Morton finally visited the attorney who handled his financial affairs. The attorney, an elderly gentleman, listened with nervous fascination and a sense of fatigued uneasiness, as Morton told him the story of his married life—stammering, confused, ashamed, bewildered, yet revoltingly clear—of the dozens of lovers which his wife had brought home to sleep with her, as she had this very day, pausing with the stranger at the door of Morton's study to shout insulting remarks at him. Was there something, anything, he could do about all this, Morton wondered, hopelessly. And when the attorney said, yes, a divorce very likely could be arranged, Morton subsided into silent astonishment.

Morton was thirty-two years of age, and a classical scholar; not a professor, but a Ph.D. who was acknowledged as an authority on the Hellenistic period of Greece after the death of Alexander the Great. Luckily, his financial security did not depend on the slender royalties from his few heavily-documented books. Income properly, shrewdly acquired by his father, brought more than enough money to take care of Morton, married or single.

Beset with what the head of the university's history department described to Morton as “your apparently insurmountable communication problem,” Morton had attempted to teach just once, briefly. He fell into an immediate and undeviating silence on the one occasion he and the class met on mutual grounds, but the university managed to get rid of him without having to dismiss him, by the graceful means of obtaining for him a two-year grant to study and write in Greece. Effective immediately. Morton went to Athens, in the care of his proud father, who remained long enough to get Morton settled comfortably and “to see the sights,” as he put it.

Slightly more than a year passed for Morton, happily and alone in an erudite fog, and suddenly his father died—and he met Natalie.

Natalie was a secretary at the embassy. Morton did not apprehend that she was tall and voluptuously constructed. He did not even realize that she was female. He saw her only as a sexless symbol of the helpful, godlike embassy which was assisting him in the impossibly difficult task of getting the earliest airplane flight, taking him as swiftly as possible to his father's funeral.

But Natalie was enormously attracted by Morton's physical bulk, by the soft details of his hands, by the impressive paraffin brow, by Morton's scholarly attainments, by his rather obvious financial well-being (he had exhibited his bank books as well as his passport to prove his American citizenship). Natalie determined to marry Morton, which she did, not long after he returned to Athens to complete the term of his grant.

“You're rumpled and comfortable,” Natalie had said to Morton, flattering him, she thought, although he wasn't listening. He was thinking of his deceased mother, who had the habit of stroking his hand when she talked to him, stroking it as if it were a pet rabbit.

“You're going to be good for me,” Natalie whispered, and still Morton did not hear. In his darkened Athenian apartment, perfumed with the delicate scent of olives, he felt her hand on his, stroking, and thought of his mother: and so, dreaming, he had kissed Natalie, meeting her eager searching lips while he searched for her cheek.

And Natalie accepted his unprompted marriage proposal, and arranged everything, everything.

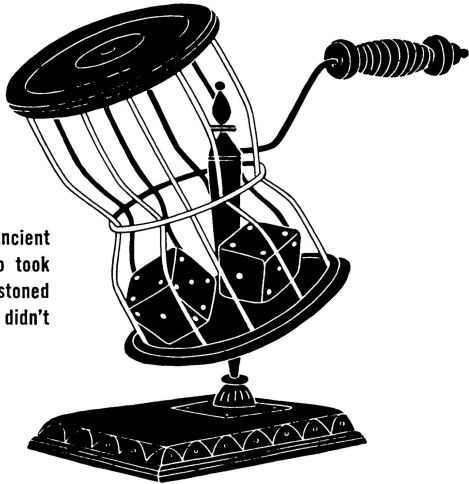

“You think you're someone special, don't you? Oh you're special, all right! You're not just any old jerk, you're an authentic jerk!”

Natalie's bitterness had flowered months before she and Morton left Athens; after a frustrating several weeks in San Francisco, the flowering bitterness, cross-pollinated with hatred, produced a livid sequence of acrimonious, one-sided domestic crises. Smothered by Natalie's forthright venom and Morton's seeming indifference, the marriage collapsed. The contract was written off the celestial ledger when Morton's attorney, as he had earlier advised, obtained a divorce for Morton. Because of her loose-hipped promiscuity, blatantly provocative and easily verified, Natalie re-entered the unmarried hemisphere with scant plunder from Morton's bankroll.

While the divorce proceedings provided an unwholesome and time-consuming interference with his scholarly labors, Morton did not falter in the single-minded pursuit of his dream: even if it consumed thirty years of his lifespan, he was determined to create a landmark in classical studies, as a monument to Dice go back to the time of ancient Greece and the inventor, who took his buddies for plenty, was stoned to death because they felt he didn't give them a fair shake . . .

CRAPS!

by Sam Ewing

Crapshooting has altered the course of history and changed the face of the earth. Men have wagered their empires, chanced their wives and risked their very lives on the shake, rattle and roll.

Dice are the most ancient gambling implements known to man, and the first fall of the dice goes back to a crafty Greek named Palamedes.

History tells us that Palamedes had the mind of a genius and the soul of a scoundrel. Greek legend credits him with the invention of the alphabet, the lighthouse, scales and measures, and the discus. He also invented money.

Palamedes first introduced coins as a medium of exchange, and he was clever enough to follow through by introducing the dotted cubes—a slick means of stuffing his toga with the ready cash of his fellow citizens. Money and dice have been inseparable companions ever since.

According to tradition, the cunning and resourceful Palamedes handcarved his dice and rattled the first pair during the siege of Troy. He generously taught the new game to his countrymen and, as the world's first craps shooter, he greedily raked in their loot.

As expected a Grecian warrior, with time on his hands and money in his pouch, would shuffle curiously over to the ring of gambling gentlemen and ask, "What new sport playeth thou?"

Instantly he would be invited to join in the fun. After the battle-scarred veteran's palms warmed up to the cubic itch, he would find himself moved by the spirit of the exciting passtime and go for broke.

You never saw a statue or a picture of a Greek warrior wearing pants, did you? No doubt Palamedes won them. Come to think of it, many statues of the ancient Greeks portray them as naked as a newborn.

To say the least, Palamedes' rolling bones caught on like the wheel and they have been rolling through the centuries.

Gambling itself goes back to the most primitive man. The earliest human beings believed that a lucky gambler was favored by the gods. Man visualized his world as a giant gaming table controlled by supernatural beings. To his simple way of thinking, he and his fellow humans were merely dice gripped in a giant, invisible hand. A lucky toss determined a successful victory in war, or success in kidnapping the prettiest woman of a rival tribe and dragging her to his primitive pad. The everyday life of the ancients was a game of chance played in high hopes of gaining the favor of the gods. Superstition was a way of life and it persisted long after Palamedes put a pair of dice in mankind's own hand.

In modern times dice are generally cut of bone or plastic. In a pinch you can make do with a pair of sugar cubes with the sides numbered from 1 to 6. The numbers are placed so that the sum of two dots on opposite sides equals 7. From the ruins of Babylon and in Egyptian tombs, archaeologists have unearthed dice much like those we have today. Dating back hundreds of years B.C., they are made of metal, ivory or stone.

Pagan priests tossed dice to "talk" with the gods. The priests read the answers to their questions in the way the numbers came up. Men lost all their worldly goods — often, their lives — when the numbers spelled out disaster and death. It is supposed that even in those early times, some priests slipped in loaded dice to fleece their gullible followers.

The high mucky-mucks of early societies damned Palamedes and his dice. They thundered that crapshooting was immoral and lewd. In the Middle Ages the rabbis of Europe banned dice, and the rigorous moral codes of the Puritans, Calvinists and many Protestant congregations set moral codes against games of chance. Yet, nothing could prevent craps from becoming the most universally played game, and the most popular.

Biblical history recalls that Roman soldiers threw dice for the robe of Jesus Christ at the very foot of the cross.

The fall of dice decided the political fate of Julius Caesar as well. In 49 B.C. the Rubicon was a narrow stream that formed the boundary line between Rome and the main part of Italy and Cisalpine Gaul, the province allotted to Caesar. Law forbade Caesar to enter Italy with his troops under arms. In a daring act, tantamount to a declaration of war, Caesar led his troops to the banks of the Rubicon. There he halted for a while as he pondered the drastic step he was about to take. Caesar told his officers, "We may still retreat, but if we pass this little bridge, nothing is left for us but to fight."

At last, in a sort of passion, Caesar cast aside logical, political and military calculations, and putting himself in the hands of the gods, he threw a pair of dice on the ground and studied the numbers.

Coining a proverb that has become a byword for gamblers who enter upon dangerous and bold attempts, Caesar said, "The die is cast."

With these words that were to echo down through history, Julius Caesar led his army across the river to become the master of the Roman Empire.

Women were a scarce commodity in the Old West and in the Klondike gold country. Females rolled into frontier towns in wagon loads, but there were not enough to go around. As a result, frontiersmen and prospectors usually gambled for the lot. Many a man died from a gunshot or knife wound or he was beaten to death in dice games in which the stakes were sex and warm companionship in a near-womanless world.

On the lighter side of high rolling, there's the modern yarn of the free-wheeling big spender and fabulous tipper who found a new waiter serving him breakfast in his Florida hotel suite.

"Where's my regular waiter?" the guest wanted to know.

The new waiter grinned and said, "Sir, Larry isn't serving you anymore. I won you in a crap game last night."

Just as the pagan priests of ancient times concocted crooked dice to balk their believers, such a method of cheating is an international practice. Loaded dice are as old as crapshooting itself, and fast-buck artists are everywhere. Bullets, cement overcoats and sharp steel do many a cheater in. Or, caught in the act of using crooked cubes, a shifty player may come out lucky with merely broken wrists and ankles.

Men in the armed forces have their special ways of dealing with crapshooters who "plug" dice. Not long ago in Viet Nam, Sergeant X gained fame as the luckiest NCO in camp. When "Sarge Lucky" threw the dice they usually rolled to a 7 or 11. The sergeant's pack bulged with his buddies' money and his stockpile of the long green grew like lettuce in the Salinas Valley, much to the envy of his fellow soldiers.

The money-winning Sarge had close to a dozen pairs of solid-colored die which he carried in a small tin box, both in and out of action. One day a ring of non-coms and privates were playing a friendly game—Sarge winning, of course—when the lucky sergeant was summoned to the Command Post on the double. Before he left, however, the sergeant carefully placed his dice in the tin box and neatly stuffed it into his pack.

Call it fate. Call it uncanny. Call it what you like. A Southern corporal jokingly spoke up.

"What's say we boil the luck out of Sarge's bones?" he said.

He took the tin box full of dice and placed it on the lighted kerosene stove that warmed the hut.

Sure enough, the "luck" boiled out of the cubes. As they melted, so did the lead shots in them—those little plugs that would generally turn up a 7 or an 11.

When "Serge Lucky" returned to the hut he looked into grim, accusing faces. He turned as white as dots on black dice himself when he glanced from the angry faces to the contents of the tin box.

PIP

There are several reasons why Pip is so named. But we're so sure that none of you readers can guess or figure out three of them that we're going to run a contest and give away $100 to every guy who comes up with the right answers. Anyone can enter. All you have to do is tear off the top of your head and sent it along with your entries. Or, if this doesn't meet with your fancy, you can enter our second or auxiliary contest. Winners get $10 but each entry must be accompanied by a $20 bill. Now if you read this superficially, you'll come to the conclusion that you can't win. But if you delve more deeply, you'll come to the same conclusion—but with a difference! This is one contest that eliminates suspense and uncertainty—you know right from the start you're going to lose. There's an added advantage, too—it is impossible for you to end up being disappointed. Which, even if you don't enter the contest, is what you won't be when you look at Pip. And now we think it's time to tell you why she is so called. Her real name is Penelope Ivy Peters. Get it? Her initials spell out Pip. Sec-only she was born in Mississippi and when she was a little tot, she pronounced it Misspip. Naturally, everyone called her Miss Pip and then just Pip. And lastly, she is called Pip because she's — altogether now, everybody — that's right, she's a real pip! □ glands . . . even the transverse colon. However, the lower I worked, the more flustered I became. I was blushing furiously when I reached the descending colon . . . perspiring freely when I reached the mesenteric arteries, and breathing quite heavily when I reached the uterus and the various things which your instruction sheet euphemistically call "The Reproductive Organs."

And now, Mr. Star President, we come to the crux of this letter!

Your brochure and package advertisements plainly state, and I quote: "Understanding female biology requires observation of those parts relating to reproduction!" It was only after I had cemented all of the lower abdomen together that I realized the most important female part — at least as far as a male is concerned — WAS MISSING! Good Lord! What turmoil! What frustration! Oh, you can't imagine what I went through during the next three hours. I turned the house upside down looking for IT — feeling perhaps IT had fallen out of the package. My wife found me crawling around the floor and peering beneath the bed. She asked what I was doing. I told her I was looking for IT (only she and I have been man and wife long enough that I felt I could use the generic term for IT). She shouted, "Hurray!", and before I could stop her, she began disrobing. Well . . . that shot the next forty-five minutes to hell. Later, because the model had come through the mails, I went to the post office parcel-post window and asked if they had seen IT lying around on the floor anywhere. When I was forced to use vulgarity to describe exactly what I wanted, the assistant postmaster bodily threw me out with the remark, "What the hell do you think this is . . . a brothel?"

I was almost frantic as I limped

SEE THROUGH WALLS

AMAZING SPY DEVICE TURNS SOLID WALLS TO GLASS

Have you ever wished you could see what was going on in another room? Now, with "SPY PEN" every wall becomes an open door. Penetrates solid matter such as thick walls, doors and similar barriers. Even looks DOWN through floors into the room below. Many other uses too numerous to mention here. "SPY PEN" conceals the greatest espionage device ever used by German intelligence during World War II to observe suspected enemies of the state. Used TODAY by INTER-POL secret police to get the goods on dope smugglers, agents from foreign countries, etc. "SPY PEN" slips into your pocket like an ordinary fountain pen. Even if seen it will never be suspected.

BUILT-IN SECRET DRILL

To see through walls, a secret drill inside silently makes an unnoticeable hole right through the toughest plaster or wood. (Even a person standing near the wall will not hear the hole being drilled.) Then an amazing precision optical instrument also concealed in the "SPY PEN" telescopes through the hole.

PHOTOGRAPH THROUGH WALLS

This instrument has a 172° wide angle lens that scans the ENTIRE ROOM from wall to wall, beyond the scope of ordinary human vision. You can photograph through the "SPY PEN." Let us see persons standing against the SAME wall you are looking through. Use it whenever you want to secretly view an ENTIRE area, TOP, BOTTOM and SIDES. Think of the things you can uncover with this masterful secret device. Unlimited uses. Comes complete with instructions and suggestions for obtaining perfect results. PERMANENT INSTALLATION OR PORTABLE "SPY PEN" can be permanently installed anywhere and yet never be detected. Order extras and install them wherever desired. "SPY PEN" is the "ONLY" observation device on the market today that is portable and can be used in more than one place, since it does not require permanent attachment to the wall or door. some Larry from one sister, joy-girl Jo. When Jo secludes herself in the attic for the purpose of "creativity," is she really alone?

ANNE OF GREEN GABLES —

An illegitimate orphan girl, apparently all innocence, gambols into a small Canadian province, where she causes a town scandal by putting something instead of vanilla into a cake she bakes. Could it be pot?

ROBINSON CRUSOE—A handsome rogue is cast ashore on a romantic South Seas island, where he meets a brown-skinned maiden, whom he names his "Gal Friday." (To avoid censorship problems, author Danny Defoe presents her as his "Man Friday.") Sophisticated readers, however, will read sex between the lines.)

VANITY FAIR — Bill Thackeray's saga of sin and seduction with brazen Becky Sharp, in what cheering critics hope is the first of many from this talented newcomer. Bill is now working on the second in the series, tentatively titled either Vanity Place or Peyton Fair.

THE TURN OF THE SCREW—A sex-driven spinster's frustrated lust, for her employer leads her into the arms of ghosts, who, one by one, take their turn of her.

ROBIN HOOD—Rogues Robin, Little John, Friar Tuck, Will Scarlet, Allen-a-Dale, George-a-Greene, and others arrow-in on a passionate minx, Maid Marian-a-go-go, in a ribald romp through — and on — the moss and secluded nooks of Sherwood Forest. A woody frolic of robbing the rich and giving it to the gals, sure to delight all outdoormen and other stags.

TARZAN — A saga of sin among the saplings by Edgar "Rice-krispy" Burrows, in which a sexy-grunting man, Tarzan, trees-up with an Amazonia beauty, Jane, who is dressed only in leopard skin and moss. Out of their passion eventually comes a seven-foot son, Boy! Try Tarzan for something really primeval. He really goes ape!

REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM—"They call me Ribald Rebecca," she cooed, flicking her pigtail over one shoulder revealingly. "I live down the road a piece at a pad you yokels call Sunnybrook Farm. Actually," she murmured coyly, flicking her pigtail back to where it was, revealingly, "it's a still — among other things."

Thus begins the torrid story of Rebecca, a ten-year-old in years but a Lolita in other ways! Particularly after she goes to live with two older women, Miranda and Jane, who teach her, revealingly, many things about "farming." Thrill with this sophisticated teeny-bopper as she romps with an admirer, Adam Ladd, whom she calls Mr. Aladdin. Watch his magic!

None of these books are recommended for anybody under six years of age. □

This particular sergeant hopes someday to return to his peacetime job as coupler in a Gulf Coast gambling joint. Meantime, he spends a great deal of time in Army hospitals, recovering from a luckless chain of "unfortunate accidents."

Crapshooting in the United States amounts to close to a billion dollars annually, according to the best estimates. And it all goes back to Palamedes, the world's first crapshooter. How proud that old rascal would be if he could study the fast action at crap tables in the fabulous gambling casinos of the world!

Yet, we have to pity that sly, inventive high roller of ancient Greece. As the world's first professional gambler, the old boy was not very well liked, especially after he made his boodle. As with most men who live dangerously, his own number eventually came up.

Palamedes was stoned to death by his fellow Greeks. They felt he did not give them a fair shake. □

Join the Sex Rebellion—Get authentic Adult-Action Films!

I'LL SHOW YOU HOW!

Why should you as a prospective buyer, and I as a source of adult merchandise, be forced to conform to outdated Victorian concepts of sex morality... to permit the "blue-noes" to dictate what we, as responsible adults, can or cannot see or read for our personal pleasure?

A new rebellion, a wind of change, is sweeping the land! Doctors Johnson and Masters have written a famous, best-seller book in which they describe, in detail, films of couples in the sex act. Why then, can't you enjoy the adult action movies that many would like to suppress?

You can! I have perfected a plan that puts you in touch with purveyors of the hard-to-find action films you've been seeking—and without risk to you! These discreet, little-known sources are out to provide what you want, and to gain your repeat business. I am merely a "middleman".

If you don't have a satisfactory connection; if you're fed-up with "wild" claims and run-of-the-mill merchandise, then try me. I won't disappoint you! Send just $1. You'll start receiving confidential offers (some with free samples) within two weeks! Act now! Do not respond unless you are at least 21, extremely broadminded, and seeking the truly unusual!

REBEL REFERRALS, Dept. MS-101717 No. Highland, Suite 404, Hollywood, Calif. 90028

RECORDS

Chuck Berry's Golden Decade—1955-65 (Chess) wraps up a remarkable string of songs performed and written by the rock-and-roller. The twin LP's contain 24 top standards including "Maybelline," "Johnny B. Goode," and "Sweet Little Sixteen," among others.

The Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem turn in another rousing performance in their newest, Freedom's Sons, recorded during a concert in Dublin. There's a good mix of Irish patriotic songs including the title tune and "Outlawed Rapparee," in addition to some clever non-political items.

Comedy platters are generally on the slide but Bill Cosby's monologues continue to roll along at a fast clip. Revenge (Warner Bros.) should sustain the momentum. Once again, Cosby has come up with fresh stories and observations told with total credibility.

You're A Good Man Charlie Brown is one of the season's gayest musicals and with M-G-M's original-cast recording, the idea based on the Peanuts comic strip has gone full circle. It was originally launched on record, then converted into the click off-Broadway show. The near-flawless cast gives tuncy tribute to the comic's characters — Schroeder, Lucy, even Snoopy the dog.

Many beautiful Yiddish and Hebrew folk songs have been diluted by "pop" renditions but Tova Ronni, a fine performer of such material, sets the record straight with her authentic Songs of My People (Roulette).

Ian & Sylvia, the Canadian folksinging duo, have become one of the top combinations in the field and their latest platter So Much For Dreaming (Vanguard) shows them as first-rate performers and composers. The title tune plus "Summer Wages" and "Grey Morning" are real sparklers.

Harper's Bizarre, the new pop combo, has more to offer than a zany name. In their first LP, Feelin' Groovy (Warner Bros.), the quintet displays a smooth-sounding attack and thankfully resists the temptation of assaulting the listener with blasts of electronic sound. The set includes the unexpected — a take-off on "Peter and the Wolf" and a rendition of "Happy Talk," the Rodgers & Hammerstein tune. The rest is contemporary and just as good — "The Debutante's Ball" and "Come Love," for example.

The complete solo piano music of Ravel, on two LP discs, makes an attractive album and the pleasure is doubled by the delicate touch of Werner Haas. Ravel Piano Music (Philips) delivers Ravel in all shadings, from utmost control to extraordinary dynamics.

Operatic Arias (London), recorded by the Metropolitan's Spanish soprano Pilar Lorengar, is a dazzling collection of material delivered with brilliance and ecstasy. Miss Lorengar is a lovely-looking singer with voice and emotional depth to match. The five Puccini selections alone are worth the price of admission.

Mary Wells, one of the best talents to emerge from the Detroit rhythm & blues center, really clicks on her latest Atlantic disc, The Two Sides of Mary Wells. Neatly dished up on a varied menu are "Satisfaction," "Sunrise, Sunset," and "Love Makes The World Go Round."

The New York City Opera's production of "Der Rosenkavalier" starring Elisabeth Grummer was one of the year's moving operatic triumphs and Miss Grummer repeats that feat in a splendid renewal of Weber's Der Freischütz (Seraphim). She is supported by the Berlin Philharmonic and a cast of equally fine soloists.

BOOKS

All of them are gems but the title tale, much longer, is the real sparkler in Meyer Liben's collection, Justice Hunger and Nine Stories (Dial). "Justice Hunger" concerns a young New Yorker who finds something exotic yet unsophisticated in a girl from the Middle West. Libben's flavorful and nostalgic setting—New York during the mid-thirties—is a charming study in itself, right down to the sullen waiter and the last cinnamon danish on the tray.

The Mask of Apollo (Pantheon) by Mary Renault might be called an historical novel since it is rooted in what we know of Greek Sicily during the fourth century B.C. But as the plot thickens around a wandering actor, the book gels into an absorbing and lurid international tragedy. It's recommended.

Men have recognized it for a long time but lately women too are seeing the faults and dilemmas of modern femininity. Women writers have advised their sisters to take a lover, take up golf, or take on a career. Now Margaret Bennett gives us Alice in Womanland or The Feminine Mistake, (Prentice-Hall) in which she spoofs most of the previously published advice to women. Alice in Womanland, using the format of the classic children's tale, is a clever concoction of wit and satire. Enjoyable reading for you and the woman in your life.

Witold Gombrowicz has been called the greatest unknown writer of our time but the Polish-born novelist's recent effort, Pornografia, should serve to familiarize his name. The book is not as corrupt as it sounds. In it, true, two old men are seized with a compulsion to mate a teen-age boy and girl who apparently have little interest in each other. But appropriately, the story and its erotic fantasies culminate not in a sexual act but in a wartime murder in which the four collaborate. Here is a chilling commentary on the relationship between youth and age, and a compelling story.

After reading Donald Barthelme's whimsical Snow White (Athe-neum), one wonders what the author might do with a take-off of Pinocchio or even Little Red Riding Hood. Barthelme's heroine is a miss with seven male roommates. And when there's any hanky-panky—which is often enough—it takes place in the shower. At other times, the roommates spend their time preparing vats of Chinese baby food! Snow White is full of deftly controlled black humor that's fun. No kidding.

A Sport and A Pastime (Doubleday) celebrates the rites of erotic innovation as practised by a 34-year-old American and a young French girl. Author James Salter propels the two through a whole catalog of amorous exercises. Tragically good reading, starring the French girl as both Aphrodite and a dumbbell who dreams of babies and American refrigerators.

Bob Dylan's off-beat lyrics and guitar, before and after amplification, have electrified a generation and created around him a sort of mystique. Daniel Dramer's new study Bob Dylan combines outstanding photography and a warm, behind-the-scenes text to reveal Dylan the composer-performer and Dylan the man. Citadel Press has it in paperback or hard cover.

Do you realize that millions of dollars are sometimes paid by special interests to keep worthwhile inventions under wraps? If so, you might take The Zolotov Affair (Sherbourne Press) seriously. Otherwise, Robert H. Rimmer's madcap novel is a romp of kidnappers, a master hypnotist, a liberal sprinkling of sex, and a beautiful blonde who is always nude, except for her mink coat. The leader of this merry band is a modern alchemist who knows the secret of turning lead into gold.

The Groucho Letters (Simon & Schuster) might sound like an F.B.I. file until you realize the volume contains the correspondence of that black-moustached Marx brother. Everyone seems to be publishing his letters of late but this collection contains some very funny items. When Warner Brothers objected to the title of the Marx Brothers' film, "A Night in Casablanca," because of its similarity of the Ingrid Bergman title, "Casablanca," Groucho suggested that the average moviegoer could probably distinguish between Harpo and Bergman. "I don't know whether I could, but I would like certainly to try," wrote Groucho. His letters read like ad-libs, and they're just as hilarious.

For those who'd like to know what really goes on backstage, Letters From An Actor (Viking) is recommended. The book is concerned with the production of "Hamlet" directed by John Gielgud and starring Richard Burton in the title role. The author, William Redfield, played the role of Guildenstern and in Letters he outlines the creation of the production from auditions to out-of-town rehearsals and the final opening in New York. The Gielgud-Burton "Hamlet" was a huge financial success but many credit this to the notoriety then surrounding Burton's romance with Elizabeth Taylor. Redfield tells what the highly-touted "Hamlet" lacked and why.

Im Lonely too Mister....

And it isn't fun, I know. Perhaps we are alike. I'm quiet, don't care much for Hollywood-type "fun", and spend most my time making and writing new "Pen Pals" — exchanging ideas with a few "hip" fellows who take an interest in me.

I'm a figure model, but I got awfully tired of some "promoters" selling my special films and pics to just anyone — so decided to offer them myself, to my own trusted friends. Will you be my friend? Tell me about yourself. Then I'll send you an intimate personal letter, along with some most unusual films and pictures.

(Won't you please enclose just $1 to help cover expense?) This can be a wonderful experience for both of us! Your new friend,

Eve Miller

LIFE AND LOVES

his parents—the first and probably the last truly comprehensive study of Hellenistic Cosmopolitanism.

That tidal thought gave Morton a feeling much like awe, and he bathed in it, as if in a scented bath. Alone and in peace, he lived for his destiny. Marriage had been a nasty and ridiculous interference. He could not imagine how it had come into being, but in Morton's opinion recent history, especially his own, was not a fit subject for cogitation. He preferred not to think about Natalie, and he eliminated her from conscious thought, speeding the process of elimination by writing her name on an index card and then deliberately misfiling the card under "Troy—Plumbing and Heating."

Is it possible that a man such as Morton would marry again? After the experience of his first marriage? While his life is committed to a massive intellectual struggle so demanding that the imposition of the condition of marriage is unthinkable? Faced with a matrimonial menace only a year after a divorce has given him freedom from fear, freedom from interference, freedom from insults, and freedom from Natalie, does it not stand to reason that Morton would find some means to retain his unshackled and purposeful identity? At any cost?

Margarete had the face of a pink, underfed terrier. Her body was thin and lithe as a good riding crop. Naked, she looked like an eleven-year-old girl trained from infancy to become an acrobat. Two toes were inconspicuously absent from her left foot. Margarete had used her surgeon's skill to amputate the toes herself. When she rendered a detailed report on the operation to Morton, he became so nervous that Margarete gave him an organically-grown sedative. Soon he fell asleep, his mouth open.

After checking his pulse and placing an herb under his pillow to insure a rapid recovery of his strength. Margarette set the alarm to wake Morton shortly before she retired for the night. Kissing him as he slept now, collecting his vitality. Margarette thought: "My darling's breath smells so manly. Like wet earth."

Look at Morton, theoretically at work on his monumental opus, with his face resting on the vacant, smooth surface of the desk, and his open mouth giving off the healthy scent of wet earth. You there! Morton! Why do you sleep? Why are you so thin? Why is it that your pursuit of scholarly destiny stopped on the day you married Margarette, three months ago? Aren't you happy?

The details of Morton's courtship of Margarette are too fascinating to ignore. Begin with their first meeting: Morton is on his hands and knees, and he appears to suffering from an attack of what we laymen call, "back trouble."

Unable to stand, unable to reach high enough to ring the doorbell, he knocks on the door with his head. Margarette's brisk steps take her to the door; she opens it. She is wearing a white three-quarter length cotton coat, for she is a doctor and the sign above the doorbell reads: Margarete Herrold, M.D.

A doctor's examination is both aided and protected by privacy, so we must await the results, pacing the floor mentally in the grand tradition. To alleviate the distressful and interminable period between examination and verdict, we allow our troubled thoughts to travel back to the year or so previous, when Morton's divorce was granted. Upon his attorney's advice, Morton's too-spacious home is sold and Morton rents an apartment in a building occupied mainly by professionals, such as architects and doctors, many of whom fill in one another during vacations and sudden emergencies. Margarette, combining her medical practice and living quarters in one 8 mm and 16 mm Action Movies. All 50 ft. All Uncut. All masterpieces by top notch Hollywood cameramen. All torrid and terrific and all just what you've been searching for. Choose yours from the titles listed below. You take no chances. If these aren't the greatest films you have ever seen just send them back within 3 days for a full money back guarantee.

1. CAVORTING CUTIES. Iris and her girlfriend show how two uninhibited Greenwich Village Beatniks spend an evening at home. In the privacy of their own apartment these two winsome wenches go through a bump and grind sequence that is guaranteed to bring blushes to any male between twenty one and ninety. See what happens when these two beat beauties, unbound by convention or prying eyes, let themselves go before a motion picture camera.

2. PEEK-A-BOUDOIR. The camera takes you behind the locked doors of Iris' boudoir as this breathtaking beauty spends an evening at home. But Iris is restless and as she writhes and rolls waiting for her boyfriend, all of her pink and lovely curves come to life before your very eyes.

3. FOR BACHELORS ONLY. Iris, being a true nature lover and sun worshipper, thought she was alone in the great outdoors but while she was doing what comes naturally, naturally, a hidden camera recorded all of her blazare, erotic loveliness in motion. Guaranteed to make your temperature rise and your blood boil.

4. AQUA AMOUR. What do Hollywood starlets do when they cavort on the rims of their palatial pools? At one of these informal parties Iris shows how a scintillating starlet makes a sexy impression on a producer by tossing him all of her seductive curves.

5. UNDERESSED REHEARSAL. A beautiful sight is Iris as she awaits the arrival of a late date. When you see this fetching filly come to life in this film with every line of her lovely body outstanding in breathless realism you're going to wonder why anyone so bewitching would wait so long for any so and so.

6. DANCE FOR BACHELORS ONLY. Iris and her roommate reveal every delicious curve and contour of their lovely bodies. Full figure views and delightful closeups of these two gyrating gills in a dance sequence created for the broadminded and sophisticated male.

7. SOLO SEXERCISES. Iris shows how she keeps a tantalizing torso, tantalizing. Watch her do her daily dozen in the privacy of her own fenced in backyard. Every little movement has a meaning all its own and you don't need a roadmap to read the curves.

8. POOL PASSION. What does a sexy siren do on a sun, sun, sunny day? The altogether unrestrained and uninhibited Bristol Beauty proves that a gal can be hot — though cool as she dances provocatively in the privacy of her swimming pool. A rare film with sizzling action from the first curvaceous dip to the thrilling climax.

From the private files of MONSIEUR JOE MILLER

The cheer, "Hurray for our side," was first heard as Lady Godiva rode side-saddle through the streets of Coventry.

Men often make passes at girls who drain glasses

In the old days people went to bed at dark for want of anything better to do. And we still haven't really found anything better to do.

Girl to Hairdresser: Why are you crying, Mr. John?

Hairdresser: The new micro-skirts will be six to eight inches above the knee

Girl: So what?

Hairdresser: Now everyone will know.

A fashionable Hollywood suburb has so many foreign cars that no pedestrian has been hit above the knees for three years.

A Sultan sent his major domo to fetch him one of his harem girls five time a day every day. The major domo died at the age of 50 and the Sultan lived to be 90. This story points up a moral: It's not the women that kill you; it's the chasing after them that does it.

The greatest labor-saving device for most women today comes in a small bottle—it's a pill.

Kindergarten teacher: Don't cry, Billy. It's just a scratch.

Billy: I'm not going to cry — I'm going to sue.

Wife: Why don't you play golf with Jack anymore?

Husband: Would you play with a guy who cheats, moves his ball and puts down the wrong score when you're not looking?

Wife: I most certainly would not!

Husband: Well, neither will Jack.

When asked what she would like to read if ever marooned on a desert island, a chorus girl replied, "A tattooed sailor."

"Incidentally, there's a new gas that puts a rabbit in your tank. It's for quick trips.

model, she says, was just a hop, strip and a jump. She states that modeling is a snap and that she's happy she clicked. Her quips make her modeling assignments pleasant for everyone. When asked how she liked going out to an airfield at five a.m., she replied that it was a wing-ding. Sitting on a couch with a beaker of brandy caused her to comment, "Sofa it's easy, but enough of this can lead a girl to drink." Her remark about posing for shower shots is that modeling is nice clean work.

Patti is serious about one thing, however. She wants to become a top photographer herself although she admits that at one time the thought of handling a first-flight photo assignment would have given her the shudders. She says she still needs a lot of equipment but, getting in the mood ourselves, we say that she's got all the equipment any girl needs. □ connected to the thigh bone, the thigh bone's connected to the knee bone, the knee bone's connected to the leg bone . . . It was all very therapeutic, I thought, as I began singing again.

The Voyable Man skeleton assembled. I began working on the internal organs. Two hours later, I was frantically pawing through the box, searching for a missing part (which will go unnamed—it is, however, the most important male part from a female's standpoint!). It was only then I began to suspect that THERE ARE NO ITS INCLUDED IN EITHER KIT!

Good heavens, Man! What in hell is wrong with your designers? How old are they anyway . . . ten? . . . ninety-five? Don't they think IT is important? Or . . . maybe . . . ? (Really, Mr. Star President, I'd have your Personnel Director investigated as well as your designers. You know the old saying, "birds of a feather . . .") (And while you're at it, I'd keep an eye on Inspector #47-6-232, because he put a slip in the Voyable Woman package, which stated, "I personally have inspected this kit before sealing, and all parts are included.")

Thanks to your company and your incomplete and inconclusive models, I have had to undergo massive sedation. My doctor tells me I should get off this sedation before I get cirrhosis of the liver; I should do something to take my mind off the Voyable Woman and Voyable Man. I am therefore returning, under separate cover, your VOYABLE MAN and VOYABLE WOMAN which I would like to exchange for Model X651 (8" Howitzer Tank) and Model X661 (Guided Missile). AND FOR PETE'S SAKE—JUST IN CASE YOUR DESIGNERS HAVE THE PROBLEM I THINK THEY HAVE—WILL YOU PLEASE MAKE PERSONALLY SURE BEFORE MAILING THAT THE 8" HOWITZER AND THE GUIDED MISSILE ARE INCLUDED!

around town. I went into one toy-hobby store and, whispering in her ear because there were other customers present, I asked the woman proprietor if she had any extra IT around, and, if so, would she be willing to sell IT. I cannot force myself to describe the commotion that caused. Needless to say, the police sirens were converging on the place as I hobbled home through the alleys.

The uproar had caused my blood pressure to soar. Something had to be done to calm myself before I suffered a stroke.

Fortunately—or so I thought at the time—my friends had also given me your model, the VOYABLE MAN. I began working on this. Reverently, I took out the skeleton and cemented it to the plastic display base. The skull came next, then the arms . . . "the hip bone's convenient location, becomes Morton's next-door neighbor.

The divorce forgotten and Natalie misfiled permanently, Morton applies himself steadfastly to his cultural adventure. He finds that leaving his work to obtain meals in restaurants is an aggravating and wasteful process. So he stocks up on a large supply of sardines and halvah. He thrives. His mind is clear and brisk as spring water. His writing is pathologically pedantic, but authoritative, serene, annotated and indexed. Obviously he is going to birth a work that will not be read, but treasured. Day by day, hour after hour, in quiet and in deep joy, Morton plods the decadent, orgiastic, sophisticated streets of post-Alexandrian Greece, forgiving all, understanding all, recording all. A gigantic task which holds the promise of a limited honor, at best. But Morton asks for nothing but freedom to work and to share his knowledge, and in the course of his unheralded dedication to build a loving monument to his parents.

Why, then, should an insignificant and, for Morton's purposes, useless gland in his body choose to inflict pain upon him? Why, upon rising from his bed at his regular pre-dawn hour, does Morton find that he cannot rise? Why must he be forced to go without his breakfast helping of halvah, and crawl to the doctor's door, and knock upon that door with his head? Is this justice?

"There."

The massage is ended, with entire success. Morton's back trouble has vanished. He stands, jubilant, for now he is confident that he will be able to work as vigorously today as he did yesterday. He clasps the doctor's hand in thanks.

Margaret's heart is enslaved by the digital embrace. She is unable to, and does not desire to, control her passionate need for Morton. Her slender, muscular arms immobilize him; her face finds his neck under his chin; her lips burrow like two twittering moles.

"Shame," Margarete whispers. "A man of your age with a dormant prostate!"

Glowingly healthful at the age of fifty, Margarete attributes her eternal youth to exercise, spirit, sun, sweat, open bowels, diet, persistently balanced sexual activity, adventure, courage, and new challenges to tune up the senses and invigorate the regenerative cells.

"You have the constitution of an olympic champion, Morton darling. Basically magnificent. A magnificent ruin! But you can be rebuilt. I will rebuild you, with knowledge, with discipline, with my heart." She enfolds him swiftly with her wiry strength, as Morton staggers under the impact.

Margarete's lips emerge from under Morton's chin. She forms two words, soundlessly: "Love you!"

Morton attempts to smile.

Margarete's first husband was killed in a racing car smash-up. Margarete, driving, survived injuries much more serious. Her second husband accompanied her on a mountain-climbing attempt in sub-zero cold. A snow slide isolated the couple for three days, and the husband succumbed long before native guides made the rescue.

Under Margarete's watchful supervision, Morton's life routine shifted severely from the cerebral to the physical. His inactive prostate was studied, reviewed, found wanting, and regimented into activity. Margarete moved to his larger apartment and transferred his study to a somewhat smaller room, actually a large closet with a window of some sort, but adequate in Margarete's opinion.

A typical day begin when Morton and Margarete awake early, sit up in bed and, quick as you can, touch their extended toes with their extended fingers fifty times.

Quickly to the bare floor.

Fifty deep knee bends. Push-ups galore. Neck exercises. Arm exercises. Back exercises. Deep breathing exercises.

Rest for five minutes.

Eat one orange or one apple, and two teaspoons of wheatgerm.

One-mile run through park. More push-ups. More deep-knee bends. Wrestle. Shadow box. Throw medicine ball. Catch medicine ball. Ballet workout. Hot, hot shower. Cold, cold shower.

Light tea. Wheatgerm cereal.

Two-mile walk in park to aid digestion.

Margarete, pink and effervescent, starts her working day. Morton, flushed and pooped, sighs himself to sleep in his cozy little study. His landmark of history lies as dry as Alexander the Great, untouched since his new and health-inducing marriage.

Lunch: Honey and raisins.

Exercise hour.

Fruit juice cocktail.

Nap, in study.

Pre-dinner exercise.

Dinner: Yogurt, sugarless gum.

Light exercise, followed by long walk, followed by choice of relaxing physical activity.

Morton has dissolved more than forty pounds. His cheeks have charming hollows. His neck, under his chin, is eminently accessible to Margarete's lips. His wardrobe is replaced with clothing several sizes smaller. His eyes, when open, are bright-not quite feverish. He learns to tango: one, two, one two, three. Margarete keeps time for Morton: love, you, love, you, love.

Pre-bedtime snack: goat's milk highball.

Morton dissolves another twenty pounds.

Morton is tired, but he looks like a potential olympic champion; whip-plet-lean and, eventually, raring to go. Given a choice of push-ups and deep-knee bends, however, he still remains undecided. Sometimes, Margarete allows him to settle for a long run through the park. Except on Sunday, which is given over almost entirely to weight-lifting in the morning, and swimming and other beach sports in the afternoon. In the winter months, Morton is permitted to wear a T-shirt when swimming in the ocean.

A new challenge! Margarete has joined "The Cloud Jumpers."

Morton wants to sleep.

"Darling, it's the ultimate!"

Morton wants to sleep.

"The thrill of your life! It's absolutely rejuvenating!"

Morton wants to sleep.

Five private planes were involved. A small "mass" jump on a sunny afternoon. The planes take off in order from the airfield, and in a few minutes they are circling for the event. A small group of spectators watches the proceedings. Two parachutists fall like swollen leaves from the first plane, one leaf following the other by 30 seconds. The second plane drops two more chutists.

Margarete and Morton are carried in the third plane. This is Morton's never-to-be-forgotten initiation jump. He has been coached and trained by Margarete. He has jumped hundreds of times from rocks and ledges along the windy beach, learning to land spring-footed and confidently. He is harnessed with the primary chute and an emergency chute.

The door of the plane is open. A look of proud animality is jammed on Margarete's face. Her lips form the words, "love you," and she shoves Morton out of the plane.

One of the spectators thought he saw Morton thumb his nose just before hitting the unyielding ground. The pillowed thud of his unopened parachute sounded like distant thunder.

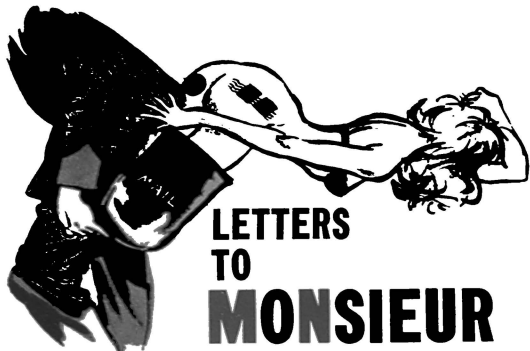

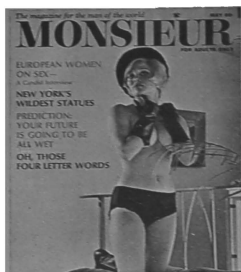

Morton's superb physical condition enabled him to survive for an incredible six minutes. When Margarete broke through the assembled ring of admiring spectators, she saw that Morton's eyes were moving as if he were searching for a name in the blazing sky.

One moment before he descended to the continent of endless sleep, he uttered his farewell.

"Natalie," said Morton. Not without regret. □

"Uncle Paul, What's a jag?"

Strictly Amateur

I've read about those amateur topless contests (Round and Round They Go) and often wondered what the girls who entered looked like. Now I know, but with the meager endowments those girls had, how could they enter such a contest?

Stan Woodley
Chicago, Ill.

Some women always make mountains out of molehills.

Abreast of the Times

So the females of Portugal (Off the Leash in Lisbon) have the biggest breasts in Europe, eh? Well, maybe it's true. I know of one Portuguese woman who decided to commit suicide, shot herself just below her left breast, and blasted her kneecap away.

Anthony Lucca
San Francisco

That's hitting pretty low, Joe.

Kid Stuff

Your last issue looked like Boy's Life. What kind of stuff are you giving us — articles about toy soldiers! What have you got planned for us next month — a step-by-step description of how to play jacks?

Jack Mitchner
Brooklyn, N. Y.

You're an ace, Jack, a real Jack-ace.

Corn On The Curb

That corny radio script (Up Your Switchboard) brought back memories. My old man used to listen to those programs when he shaved in the morning. Now I understand why he always ended up cutting himself, and sat down at the breakfast table growling.

Clyde Herkimer
Mason City, Iowa
That makes you Scowl, son of Growl.

We're Swinging

Keep The Swinger coming! She's great and really makes the scene, unlike most of the stuff in the other men's magazines.

Jim Crowley
Ames, Iowa

*We agree with you, Jim, as you can see from The Swinger's escapades in this issue.*

She Lost The Bet

My wife was so impressed with your article on safe driving, You Bet Your Life, in one of your past issues, that she had to show it to her girlfriend. However, she was driving at the time and crashed into a bus. The cop just wouldn't believe her when she tried to explain how the accident happened.

Just another case of police brutality.

NEW SEX BOOKS

Female Auto-Erotic Practices

Out of print for years. By Havelock Ellis, M.D. world's foremost sexologist. New illustrated edition!

Subjects include: initiations; auto-erotic practices with males; masturbation as the cause and cure of frustrations in marriage; various technic employed (both clitoral and vaginal); objects used for vaginal and urethral masturbation;

The use of artificial penes; mutual masturbation (both homosexual and heterosexual); psychological factors; fantasies; erotic dreams; incestuous masturbation between brother/sister, uncle/niece, father/daughter as well as a case of initiation involving mother and son;

Auto-eroticism among dissatisfied wives; girlhood experiments (with both sexes); initiations of boys by older women, nurses, etc.; club contests; public masturbation; breast stimulation, modern concepts of masturbation; primitive concepts; etc.

Illustrations include: artificial penes (both single-ended and double-ended for lesbian activities); other masturbation devices; auto-erotic humor; auto-erotic symbols; childhood postures as well as women depicted in various auto-erotic attitudes. $3.00

Sexual Anatomy

What the field of sexology has needed for a long time in an authoritative, economical book illustrating the sexual organs, and their functions, with retouched, actual photos, not just drawings. Here it is!

Edited by Joseph Dow, M.D. Contents include: physiology of erection; variations in sizes of penes (with average size as well as the largest sizes ever recorded); circumcision (both male and female); penile amputation; deforming the penis for increased coital satisfaction; the testicles; castration; the vulva; the clitoris — types and sizes; types of hymen; the vagina and its functions; differences between vagina of the virgin and the parous woman; deformities of the vagina; absence of the vagina; double vagina;

Types of pubic hair arrangements (both male and female); breast development; types of nipples, the areolae; various breast shapes; genital mutilation (male and female); sexual precocity (both boys and girls). $3.00.

Bride and Groom

By F. M. Rossiter, M.D. The only up-to-date sex manual published since Prof. Kinsey's volume on female sexuality and incorporating statistics from 1916, revised edition. Completely illustrated.

Subjects covered include: the male and female sex organs; honeymoon habits; aphrodisiacs; the mutual climax v. the individual orgasm; sex organ disparity (both male and female) and how to overcome it; the breasts as an erotic factor; delaying the climax;

Sexual deviations; glossary of sexual terms; preliminary coital technic, coital movements (for both husband and wife), coital positions — (1 to 19) husband-above, (20 to 38) wife-above, (39 to 46) on the side, (47 to 55) seated, (56 to 81) kneeling-standing, (82 to 85) special postures.

The after-play; masturbation in marriage; eliminating difficulties; preventing and eliminating sex shock in wives; problems caused by under-sexed and over-sexed males; multiple orgasms for the wife; causes of sexual failures in husbands; problems posed by over-sized and under-sized genital combinations; conception and childbirth; sex facts for married couples; the wife's preliminary arousal of the husband; body hygiene; erotic sexuality — both normal and abnormal. $3.00.

Unusual Female Sex Practices

Five aspects of unusual female sexual activities comprise this book:

Voyeurism by David O. Cauldwell, M.D. Subjects include: distinction between peeping toms and voyeurs, why girls peek, case-histories, normal and abnormal peeking, voyeurism in marriage, viewing parents during coitus, watching boys masturbate, psychological reactions, etc.;

Female Pedophilia by J. Richardson Parke, M.D. Contents include: examples of girls seducing boys; techniques used, married women initiating youths, nurses introducing charges to cunnilingus/fellation, psychological reactions, extent of practices, sexually aggressive girls, lesbian pedophilia, 10-year-old prostitutes, nymphetism, etc.;

Incest by La Forest Potter, M.D. Subjects include: causes, effects on later life, acts initiated by females, frequency, normalcy of incest, case-histories — mother / son / father / daughter, — uncle / niece, brother/sister, mother/son, results of suppressing incestuous desires, origin of the incest taboo, legalized incest, reactions of subjects, etc.;

Wife-Swapping by Wenzel Rymarkiewicz. A transcript of a tape recording between the author and a male-swapping couple. All the questions the subject brings up — why do they do this? How do they get started? etc. — are answered. A valuable insight into the mate-swapping personality;

The Early Teenager as Seductress by Barbara Hoffman. A new report on the increasing sexual maturity of the teenage female, especially those who plan sexual assaults on boys and even men. Subjects include: first intercourse, introduction to paraphilias (oral sex), detection, pregnancy, masturbation acts, emotional reactions, effects on adulthood; sexual histories, extent of activities, etc.

New illustrated edition published by Banner Books. Price $3.00.

Sex Feeling in Men & Women

Dr. Kelly's sex manual is valuable for three reasons: (1) it covers the entire subject of sex in marriage — male and female reproductive organs; sex impulse in men v. women; masturbation in and out of marriage; pre-coital stimulation; problems of sexually frustrated wives (with case-histories); sex myths; aids to penetration; oral eroticism;

(2) It tabulates in important facts generally available only in higher priced books — enlarging the penis to a maximum; the wife's assistance in overcoming semi-impotence; erotic fears of wives; eliminating problems caused by over-sized and under-sized husbands; prolonging coitus; etc.

(3) Its original drawings. These include the male and female sex organs, both internal and external and specially-drawn illustrations, available in no other manual, depicting the correct and incorrect methods of penetration (with and without penile-clitoral contact). $3.00.
